Reaching Augusta at the usual hour of actival, I proqueded to Hallowell, and teor's passage for Boston, in the swift and elegant steamer Cornelius Vanderbuilt, commanded by Capt. And. aw Brown. I found the boat crowded with presengers; three or War of whom, I soon ascertained, contemplated a similar tour to that which I had commenced. The Huntress departed from Gardiner a few moments prior to our reaching that place, which we overtook at the flourishing commercial town of Bath. A short distance below the village of the former place - passed the elegant and splendid mansion, in progress of erection, of R. H. Gardiner, Erq . The location of this expensive structure is very fine, being on a beautiful lawn extending to the river's bank, and nearly surrounded by a variety of native forest trees. The edifice is of granite; and apacious, and the exterior only apmand = be finished. When completed it will, , ithout doubt, be the most princely abode in year State.

The scenery of the Kennebec above Augusta _ as extremely beautiful, and the season added much to its beauty. The frosts of autumn had. fallen bestelly upon the foliage of the matcherious trees which skirted its banks, and eximbited to the eye of the beholder a builliancy and varietwof hug which only characterizes the splendid forest scenery of New England. There was the bright orange dye of the maple, the deep evergreen, the strong, deep red of the oak, with ever-varying bues of the different trees, which I feel-an mility to describe. It can only be appreciate by those who have-experienced the pleasura of sitne 'ng a similar soone.
